THE BIG IDEA

SCAPIA

Travel dividend

A 4 AM IDEA TURNED INTO A BET ON HOW INDIA WILL TRAVEL AND SPEND —AND HOW REWARDS WILL TRIGGER MASS CREDIT ADOPTION

AYANTI BERA

IN DECEMBER 2021, on a family vacation in Dharamshala, Anil Goteti found himself wide awake before sunrise, pacing the hotel lobby while everyone slept. After nearly a decade helping build Flipkart into the country's largest e-commerce marketplace, he was trying to decide what to build next. "I was constantly thinking about what to build," he recalls. "Then one morning it struck me, why don't I build a card that rewards people for travel?"

That spark eventually became Scapia — a travel-and-credit platform anchored around a co-branded credit card with Federal Bank. Unlike typical reward cards that scatter points across categories, Scapia is built with a single objective of pushing people to travel more by letting them earn travel coins and redeem them seamlessly on flights, hotels, and experiences inside the same app. "It's a card that sits in your pocket through the year," Goteti says, "but the rewards nudge you to travel more."

For Goteti, the idea wasn't just about a product gap. It was instinctive to how he lives. He has been an avid traveller since childhood and became fluent with technology early. Born in Ramachandrapuram in Andhra Pradesh, he moved to Chennai when his father, an electronics engineer, joined HCL in its early years. The family home was one of the first in the neighbourhood to have a TV and later a personal computer. "I got my first computer around 1990," he says. He didn't study computer science formally, but even as a college student at IIT Madras, where he graduated in electrical engineering in 2002, he was already building a website called 15to21.com, targeting the youth.

After IIT, he went to the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign for a master's in electrical and communications engineering. His first job at Qualcomm put him right in the middle of telecom history.

Anil Goteti, founder-CEO, Scapia

IN ITS FIRST YEAR OF OPERATIONS IN FY24, REVENUE WAS ₹24 CR ON A LOSS OF ₹88 CR. FY25 RESULTS ARE AWAITED

"I worked on the first 3.6 Mbps call between Qualcomm and Nortel in Paris," he says, adding that his project contributed to the chipset that later powered the first iPhone.

But even at Qualcomm, he felt the pull towards decision-making rather than engineering alone. In 2009 he enrolled at Kellogg School of Management, but before joining business school he spent two months in India working at Coca-Cola, figuring out how to improve regional sales. During the MBA, he worked at a venture firm evaluating startups. All of this was intentional, a long detour to build business and strategy instincts. When he graduated in 2011, he moved back to India, what many considered a risk.

"It was probably one of the best decisions I made in my life," he says. A short stint at McKinsey India led him to Flipkart in its formative years. He began by running the e-books business before realising, as he puts it, "Very quickly, we realised Indians don't read as much as they study." He shifted to physical books, one of Flipkart's core early categories. Over the next nine years he became part of Flipkart's leadership spine — running books, then home and furniture, then the entire marketplace. He also led pricing, promotions, and Big Billion Days. "I learnt how to build and scale a business from scratch," he says. But after nine years he hit a personal inflection point. "If I don't leave now and start on my own, then when will I?"

He quit in 2020. His first startup, Proton, a SaaS product suite for SMEs, arrived during the peak funding boom of 2021. He raised around $9 million, but the product and founder fit wasn't right. "It was a global B2B product, and I had zero B2B muscles. I'm a B2C guy," he admits. Shutting the company down and returning the money to investors was a rare decision in that market moment, but it sharpened his instincts. "This time, I didn't want to take money until I was sure the product worked."

Scapia therefore began quietly. For the first six months he bootstrapped it with personal capital. He and a small team spoke to users tirelessly, showing Figma prototypes, refining flows, building a travel experience around the card rather than a card around rewards. Though the company was officially registered in January 2022, the card and travel platform launched in June 2023 after more than a year of research and product development. "The day we put out the product, it was fire on social media," he says. But the team wasn't ready for that volume, and the next month went into scaling the customer experience to match demand.

Funding followed only after proof. Scapia raised a seed round from Z47 and Binny Bansal, then a $23 million Series A led by Elevation Capital and Bansal. The company now employs fewer than 200 people but has already built seven product categories, ranging from cards and forex to hotels, trains, and curated travel experiences.

In 2024, when Federal Bank temporarily paused onboarding due to compliance issues, Scapia turned the unexpected downtime into a product sprint. "We used that time to launch buses, trains, visas, and airport privileges," Goteti says. In its first year of operations in FY24, the company posted revenue of ₹24 crore on a loss of about ₹88 crore. FY25 results are yet to be filed. Scapia plans to onboard multiple new banks soon.

For Goteti, now 44, the feeling isn't of arrival but of alignment.

Kohli gets rolling in Ranchi, rolls back years with 52nd ODI ton

SANDEEP DWIVEDI
Ranchi, November 30

AT MS DHONI'S hometown, they set the bar high for their heroes. On the long walk to the stadium, fans in India blues articulated their wishes to reporters and influencers eager to capture the voice of the people. With 18 or 45 printed on their back, they wanted the men who have made those numbers iconic — Virat Kohli and Rohit Sharma — hit sixes and hundreds, too. They got what they wished, almost.

Virat Kohli finished on 135 from 120 balls, Rohit Sharma scored 57 from 51 balls. And between them, they hit 16 sixes. Virat's 52nd ODI ton and Rohit overtaking Shahid Afridi to become the highest six-hitter ever were the entertaining outcomes that took India to 349 for eight against South Africa in the opening match of the ODI series.

Their 136-run partnership, after the unbeaten 168-run stand they put up last month against Australia in the last ODI India played, had turned back the clock. Of late, the batting stars, in their late 30s, had been asked to play domestic cricket to prove their relevance. At Ranchi, they proved the permanence of class and the futility of judging them by their age.

After the 2-0 humiliation of the Test series against South Africa, where the home team's proud domestic record fell, Indian cricket needed a fillip. And those responsible for lifting the mood of the nation were the old guards — Kohli and Rohit. It was not for the first time that they were providing hope for Indian cricket.

With 52 ODI tons, Virat breaks Sachin Tendulkar's (51 Test tons) record for most centuries in a single format

On Sunday, by the fourth over after India were asked to bat, the collective wish of the packed galleries had been granted. The nation's Next Big Batsman, opener Yashasvi Jaiswal, after a brief exhibition of eye-catching flashy strokes, edged the ball behind stumps. This brought together the two Forever Big Batsmen, the spotlight once again on them. A failure would reignite speculation about their departure, with renewed calls of hastening the transition, like in Test cricket.

But, after an iffy start — an edged four, an lbw appeal, a gloved glance — Kohli finally hit that one shot which for years has given fans a hint that this could be his day. It was a straight down the wicket four from the middle of the bat. There would be anxious applause from the stands. Was this their lucky day?

Kohli was rolling, and also rolling back the years. Having retired from Tests and T20s, settled in London's Notting Hill for close to two years now, the fans had missed him, felt the drop in energy on the field and witnessed a drop in batsmanship. Except for the reruns on television, the live demonstration of Kohli's signature strokes had become a rarity. At Ranchi, Kohli laid out his famous playlist, rocked the stage and expectedly blew off the stadium roof.

There hasn't been a Kohli classic without that awe-inspiring cover drive. That 'work of art' was displayed in the 11th over, off South African pacer Corbin Bosch. As if making a point to offer a complete package to his fans, Kohli played his famous swat-flick six, too, once again off Bosch.

PMO seeks new study on pollution source

NIKHIL GHANEKAR
New Delhi, November 30

BEFORE THE NATIONAL Green Tribunal was informed last week that action against air pollution in Delhi-NCR was based on old emissions data, the Prime Minister's Office (PMO) directed the Commission for Air Quality Management (CAQM) and Central Pollution Control Board (CPCB) to expedite work on a new emission inventory and source-apportionment studies, it has been learnt.

With dust contributing significantly to particulate pollution, it also directed preparation of a time-bound action plan with adequate funding for the redevelopment of major urban and industrial roads, with a stress on end-to-end paving and greening of road shoulders, it is learnt.

The directions were issued during a high-level task force meeting chaired by PK Mishra, Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister, on October 23.

Apart from pollution monitoring agencies, the meeting included secretaries from at least eight departments — from environment and power to housing and agriculture — and chief secretaries of Delhi, Rajasthan, Haryana, Punjab and Uttar Pradesh.

A source-apportionment study and emissions inventory provides crucial information on the sources of air pollution and their specific contribution to different pollutants, as well as overall air quality.

According to sources, the meeting also appraised the action taken to curb major sources of air pollution ranging from dust, vehicular emissions, municipal solid waste, stubble burning, industries, and thermal power plants.

The Indian Express had reported first on November 25 about how the meeting had flagged that Delhi holds more than half of all vehicles in the entire National Capital Region — and that 37 per cent of vehicles in Delhi-NCR still belong to the outdated BS I to BS III emission norms.

Last Wednesday, the National Green Tribunal was informed by senior advocate Sanjay Upadhyay, its amicus curiae in a batch of air pollution matters, that even as a 2023 real-time source apportionment study was done, the action plan was not updated.
